

Figure IX.1: The simplest kind of ray tracing, non-recursive ray tracing, involves casting rays of light from the view position through pixel positions. A local lighting model is used to calculate the illumination of the surface intersected by the ray.