

Figure X.5: A cylinder is the intersection of an infinite cylinder and the area between two parallel planes. The ray is shown hitting the top plane, then entering the (infinite) cylinder, then exiting the cylinder, and finally hitting the bottom plane. All the front intersections come before all the back intersections, so the ray does intersect the cylinder.